

HAVANA NIGHTS

It's all about tropical Havana nights, excellent rum, the Latin rhythms and passion for dancing and for life.

DETAILED DESCRIPTION:

INVITATION

A few weeks in advance the guests receive an email invitation: a video that begins with an extract from the movie "Dirty Dancing: Havana Nights". Then professional Latin American dancers invite everyone to attend the party and experience an exciting atmosphere of Havana nights. The video ends with some examples that illustrate the dress code of the evening.

WELCOMING OF THE GUESTS

Cuban bouncers – dark handsome guys (event assistants) meet the guests at the entrance to the venue. Their job is not to allow any gloomy visitors inside – only the happy and smiling guests can enter the place. Friendly and welcoming Cuban waitresses (event assistants) offer "Cuba Libre" rum cocktails and other refreshments.

As for the music (and dancing), there is a DJ playing Latin music and professional Latin American dancers performing on the stage.

On a huge screen above the stage the guests can see a custom-made video projection, which is a compilation of extracts from the movie "Dirty Dancing: Havana Nights".

OPENING OF THE EVENT

The wild party kicks off with a performance by the masters of Capoeira; the rhythms of authentic Brazilian drums get everyone going and ready to party.

Afterwards, the Host of the event enters the stage to greet the guests and invites the Company's CEO for a welcoming speech to his employees. The Cuban party is now officially open!

Lessons of Classical Latino Dances

Professional dancers (the same from in the video invitation) teach the guests the basics of the passionate Latin American dances, such as salsa, rumba, mambo, and try to get everyone involved.

Competition of Frozen T-shirts

The Host announces that those who would like to refresh themselves should come to the stage. They are given T-shirts that had been shaped as snowballs and deep-frozen. The task is to get creative and find a way to defrost the T-shirt as fast as possible and then put it on without tearing or otherwise ruining it. The first guest to do this is the winner and is gets a prize, for example, a box of Cuban cigars.

Capoeira

The party continues with the performance by the masters of Capoeira, which consists of three parts. First, they show some acrobatic tricks. Next, they demonstrate the elements of “maculele” – a kind of an Afro Brazilian dance. In the last part, the masters of Capoeira teach the guests the basics of their art, and the performance finishes with a joint project – a dance by the masters of Capoeira and the guests.

The Top Ten Latino dancers

Now that the guests have learnt the basics of Latin American dancing and Capoeira, they can show off their skills in a competition.

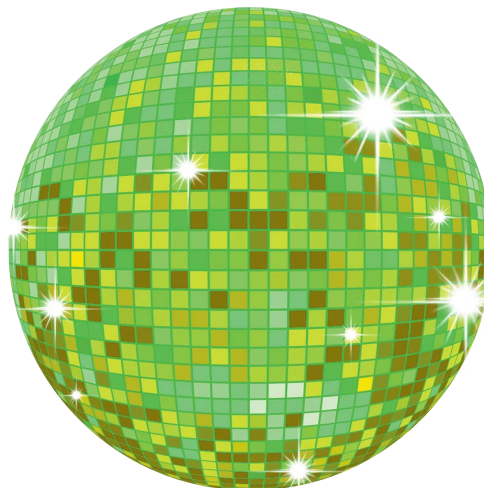

For starters, a respectable jury is formed consisting of several guests, chosen at random or otherwise. Then ten volunteer pairs are selected; they’re going to compete for the coveted title of the King and the Queen of the dance floor. Latino rhythms and the witty comments of the jury members and the Host should be real fun both for the dancers and the spectators. The winners get the prizes, such as flower garlands or a bottle of excellent rum.

Cuban Cocktail

At midnight, the Cubans (event assistants) bring in a huge dish filled with burning liquid – that’s the exclusive cocktail served at wild Havana nights, made of rum and other ingredients. There’s a traditional way to drink this cocktail: the guests join the forces to blow out the fire burning on the surface of the drink and then are given long cocktail straws, but no glasses, as this cocktail should be drunk from the same dish.

Disco

The fiesta of Latino rhythms continues, only now it’s a disco with a DJ. He plays a lot of reggaeton, the urban kind of music derived from Latino and Caribbean music. There is a pair of dancers who do their best to inspire and encourage the guests by dancing on the stage, on the bar and on the tables. Apart from reggaeton, the DJ plays a lot of well-known Latino pieces and the fun continues until the crack of dawn.

We wish you a stunning party!
